

Anna Welcomes You to The Yucantan & Sian Ka'an

The Yucatan Peninsula offers you the warmth and beauty of the Caribbean with the rich Mayan culture.

Anna's lodge is a private and remote property in the Sian Ka'an Biosphere - a UNESCO world heritage nature reserve. You stay in a simple thatched eco-house with the coral reef outside your window - right in the heart of the world-famous saltwater flyfishing of Ascension Bay.

Wading the Flats for Bonefish

Ascension Bay is recognised as one of the world's finest destinations for bonefish.

As the region is remote and few anglers fish these waters, so the bones are not 'spooky'. Even an inexperienced flyfisher can approach them within casting distance.

There are so many fishing locations within easy reach that our guides can usually find an area that is out of the wind for easier and more accurate casting. The wading is excellent and safe at all times.

This world-class fishing is literally outside your door. Those who have fished salt water in other locations will have experienced the wasted time and discomfort of long boat rides through choppy seas to get to a chosen spot. But in this unique location you can be casting to fish within minutes of leaving the lodge.

The “Grand Slam” - Permit, Tarpon & Bonefish.

Ascension Bay is one of the few saltwater flyfishing destinations where you have a realistic chance of achieving the “Grand Slam”

The key is to catch the elusive permit - and in most places it is rare to see one. But here you can have several chances in a day's fishing. Permit are very cautious and selective eaters - so even a good cast can result in a violent surge as the fish departs. They are the ultimate flats species.

Tarpon are large, strong and aggressive feeders. They will take a fly readily but have armour-plated mouths so it is difficult to set the hook. And having hooked one it is hard to land because they fight so spectacularly, with numerous jumps that can easily throw the hook or break your leader.

Fortunately all three of these sought-after species can be found in Ascension Bay, offering you the chance of a lifetime.
